In this application you can make the horoscope for any year between 1900 and 2100. This application can be useful for persons who want to know about horoscopes in general, but also for those who wants to know the predictions for many events, such as love, health, accidents, business, or whatever else you can think of. This application gives you the tools to create a "keyword-based" search for your query, which will sort your results in ways that are most relevant to you. The new search also contains a new facility to save your search as a "favorites" file for future use.

Searching using keywords: As you type, the suggestions that are available will change as you type. These suggestions will change as you type because the program is working through a list of keywords that are related to your query. If you use a keyword that is not in the list, you will see suggestions from all of your keywords. You can select any keyword from the list and then type the keywords that you want to find. The keywords that appear in the list are ranked by the estimated frequency of the keyword within the corpus (as defined in the "Keyword frequency" section of this help file), and then alphabetically. You can also see which of your keywords are being selected by the suggestion list by viewing the drop-down list in the search box. The keywords that appear in the drop-down list are the ones that are currently being used for the keyword search, and so are ranked by the estimated frequency of the keyword within the corpus. To limit your search to a specific group of keywords (such as just the medical keywords) you can deselect all of the other keywords before searching, or you can choose them all and then click the "Search all keywords" button. To change which of your keywords are selected for the search, just click on any of the keywords in the list that you want to deselect and they will be removed. To deselect all of the keywords, click on the "Clear all keywords" button. Keyword frequency: The program uses the list of keywords that are defined in the "Keyword Frequency" section of this help file. When you select the keywords from the list, you will see the frequency of that keyword. Frequency is based on the raw count of the number of occurrences of the keyword that were found in the corpus of data that was indexed, rather than the number of occurrences that were found in the indexed documents. This means that the frequency shown is not actually representative of the usage frequency of the keyword, but rather the average frequency of the keyword within the corpus. If you click on the "Report Keyword Frequency" button, you will see that the frequency of the keyword in the corpus is presented as a histogram. This
