Contents In 2003, Autodesk claimed that AutoCAD "is now a part of Autodesk's family of products that have one goal: to bring the most innovative technology to the masses at an affordable price," and "AutoCAD is not just a CAD program. AutoCAD is the world's leading 2D/3D software". The latest version of AutoCAD is 20.5.1. Released on 10 March 2017, its first update in more than three years, the release included more than 25 new features and fixes. Among the new features are augmented reality, simple 2D line artwork and 3D artwork, and improved geometric model tracking. The latest beta version of AutoCAD 2019 is 18.1. AutoCAD is a commercially released software application. Autodesk announced AutoCAD 2015 at the AutoCAD World Congress in Las Vegas on 4 May 2014. At the conference, the company unveiled AutoCAD 2015, its second version of the product in three years. In October 2014, Autodesk also announced that the company planned to release its next version of AutoCAD (18) by April 2015. In March 2015, Autodesk released AutoCAD Mechanical for free, to ease the transition to modern CAD software. In late April 2015, Autodesk announced that it was transitioning the AutoCAD product line to a subscription-based model, starting with AutoCAD 2017. History AutoCAD started out in the late 1970s as a low-end version of a CAD program produced by Microplan and branded as Microplan DX. It was distributed free of charge for internal use by U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) and other government clients, and as a large scale CAD project by contractors to USGS. The first public release of AutoCAD was in 1982 as AutoCAD for Micros, a desktop app with the working title of AutoCAD1. It was developed by AutoDesk (then Autodesk) in Palo Alto, California. AutoDesk was founded by mechanical engineer Ray Dart in 1968. Dart designed and developed AutoCAD, and worked as AutoDesk's president until 1993. Autodesk claimed AutoCAD is the world's leading 2D/3D software, saying that "AutoCAD is an industrial-strength 2D/3D CAD program, providing software with the power,
