He earned a national defense award and ended up with an honorable discharge before attending the University of Arizona. Later, he became a tour guide, a landscape architect and a consultant. Now he's the man behind the name for Chico's Fashion Square, a new redevelopment project in downtown Chico. "We wanted a name that would represent the plaza with the size of the store, but be something catchy that people would recognize," said Posthumus. Posthumus says the fashion square encompasses four blocks of downtown and will include a grocery store, chiropractor's office, fitness center, coffee shops and restaurants. Chico's is currently working with a developer who's committed to the community and knows that Chico is a "tight-knit, progressive community." His immediate goal is to attract as many people as possible. "I want to be a part of the fabric of our community and create something that everyone can be proud of," said Posthumus.
